

THE NEW LEADER OF THE DEMOCRACY

The Interesting Career of Congressman Joseph W. Bailey of Texas.

YOUNG BUT BRAINY AND ELOQUENT

When a Youth He Tended More to Fishing and Hunting Than to Study, But Since Then He Has Changed His Tactics—How He Came to Be Chosen Leader of the Minority.

A Washington letter to the New York Tribune says: Joseph W. Bailey, of Gainesville, Tex., the chosen leader of the Democratic minority in the house of representatives, is the youngest member of his party upon whom the honor of leadership was ever bestowed by a caucus in that body.

At the age of 16 years he "did not know a preposition from an adverb," but he had seen and experienced a good deal of a certain sort of life, for at the age of 13, after a maternal flogging, administered in the hope of giving him an impetus in the direction of book learning, he forsook his home and was for three years a wanderer.

Mr. Bailey now turned over a new leaf. He resolutely turned his back on the irregularities of his past, and has ever since lived a clean, sober life. He devoted himself to his profession, and also, as was a matter of course with a young and ambitious southern lawyer, he paid particular attention to politics.

In 1888 he was nominated as one of the Democratic candidates for election to the legislature of Texas, and was elected. Two years later, at the age of 27, he was nominated for representative in congress from the Fifth Texas district, and was elected by a plurality of 22,538 votes.

Mr. Bailey's career in congress has been that of an exceedingly promising and successful one. In the short space of six years he has risen to the leadership of his party in the house of representatives, and he is not yet 34 years old.

It is his duty to become a chief custodian and expounder of the constitution of the United States. Fortunately for him, he discovered his mistake before it was too late, and he learned within a reasonable time what many others fall over to learn, to place a more moderate estimate upon his own powers and knowledge. He is an orator of considerable ability, and some of his speeches attracted favorable attention. It was fortunate for him that a time had come when the older leaders of his party in the house of representatives were constrained to share some of their honors with younger men, and at the beginning of his second term of service he was promoted to a seat in the committee on the judiciary.

In the fifty-fourth congress Mr. Bailey added to his reputation as a debater, began to exhibit broader and at the same time more conservative tendencies, and to show a desire to discard the narrow provincialism which shackles the opinions of so many southern Democrats. Some of his associates unexpectantly retained his place as a member of the judiciary committee, and was also a member of one of the elections committees which tried a number of important cases. While he still felt constrained to stand by the conclusions of his party associates in all these cases, he sometimes did so with apparent reluctance. A CANDIDATE FOR SPEAKER. Last winter, when it became evident that the fifty-fifth congress would convene in an extraordinary session this spring, Mr. Bailey announced himself as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for speaker of the house of representatives.

Mr. Bailey won, and thus he became the parliamentary leader of the minority, not only in the house, but in the committee on rules, and in that capacity he has been successful in many ways and means. Whether or not he will be a successful leader is a question which everybody in the house of representatives is asking, and to which various answers are given. Some say that he lacks application and industry, some deny that he possesses the requisite ability and qualifications, but a majority of the Democrats, as well as many Republicans, express the opinion that he will do as well as any other member of his party would do under the circumstances.

NEW YORK FASHIONS. Parasols, Jackets and Capes, Velvets, Waists, Costumes of Thin Fabrics, Linen Suitings, Gents' Fashions.

FIGURED MOIRE is a beautiful and durable material for parasols; so handsome in itself as to need very little trimming, and colored silk, draped with black chiffon, bears out the stylish fancy for colored linings. White parasols, intended for veranda use, at Saratoga or Newport, are elaborately trimmed, and a very handsome one has white chiffon draped over white silk, the outside covering being white lace, with a star top of printed chiffon; the inside showing white gros grain ribbon, tacked over every rib and white chiffon folds cover the sides. Green or purple are well represented in parasols, and black is in good demand, as it is in harmony with all colors. There is no limit to ruffled parasols and embroidered grass linen cannot be ignored in view of its great popularity as a dress material.

A REMINDER OF LARGE SLEEVES exists in dressy little spring capes, fitted at the back, and not unfrequently at the front, with cape sleeves of platted chiffon over ribbon, standing off in the most aggressive manner. Capes are shorter and more dainty than ever, and platted black chiffon and lace or spangled net are used as linings. Plain capes, with colored silk hoods, are again shown, and a very few plain, tailor-made jackets. The really stylish coverings for all but very stout, elderly people are short, plain cloth

SKIRTS OF THIN FABRICS are always separate, with a slip-skirt below, and a foot trimming of some kind. Ruffles vary from three to ten through the first consideration should be the general style of the wardrobe, a popular garniture for ruffles, a touch of black is imparted by a very narrow velvet binding at either side, or colored satin ribbon is also a change from lace. The Spanish flounce is much employed, often with rows of insertion running through it. An insertion is appropriate without an outline. White muslin lining is sometimes preferred to colors, though their white muslin over colored silk makes a lovely dress for a young belle. Nothing new has come up regarding organdie or muslin waists—fully full, round and quite loose at the front, with a ribbon belt and shoulder knots. Wide or narrow (if) or something of that order, are invariably set in the armpits to fall to the top of the sleeve, and crumpled tucks in clusters, trim many elbow sleeves.

FOR LONG SLEEVES the mousetraps (a new name for the Sarah Bernhardt sleeve) is very graceful; the material wrinkled from the top frills to the cuff, and several rows of lace insertion add in prevent anything like stiffness. Each-colored satin ribbon is an inexpensive and pretty garniture for skirts, with the narrowest possible width on the waist. Linen suitings have proved satisfactory that they are now very prominent particularly the Donegal suitings, which have a beautiful sheen, an even texture throughout, and come in ten different colorings.

THE PREVALENCE OF CRIMSON offers opportunity for a great display of color at Easter and the windows of a wholesale millinery house on Broadway tell the story—one window given up to crimson silk straw hats a second to green, and a third to purple. Gentlemen's shirts, socks and neckties show a wealth of color which surprises even the young and is treated with great contempt by veterans. Gai plaids, stripes, or checks on shawl bosoms, are in keeping with ties of crimson, purple or an open silk weav in pink and green stripes, or which throughout is a new departure for the De Joinville. The "Johnstone" is leading tie, quite narrow, without lining, the ends being about two and half inches wide, with hemmed edge. The variety in crimson ties is unprecedented, and the fact that vests are of very high is supposed to account for the lavish use of color. Wool plaid bicycle shirts with white linen collars at the latest idea for summer use, and edges of the fashionable cuff are round.

HERE'S A PRACTICAL CHARITY Scheme to Furnish Nurlings with Milk of Asses.

An association has been formed in Dresden, under the protection of Queen Carola, for the supplying of asses' milk at low rates. This milk affords to nursing infants the best substitute for mother's milk, and enjoys a well merited reputation for its value in pulmonary tuberculosis and in severe gastric and renal disease. The more general employment of asses' milk has been prevented by the difficulty of obtaining supplies. It is now proposed to purchase suitable ground near Dresden and begin the regular production of the article.
